

Synopsis: Gunslinger

When Abigail Clayton arrives in San Francisco as a mail-order bride in 1969, she plans to start a new life, far away from the streets of New York where she and her brother made a dubious living as pick-pockets and con-artists. That life is behind her...or so she thinks until she discovers her "new" husband Travis Sayer has been gunned down.

Gunslinger Luke Cameron didn't mean to kill the man, but someone jostled his arm in a street brawl. He needed to know if Sayer had been the man who conned his grandmother out of her life-savings. Now all he could do was try and find out whether the General Store the man had opened had been purchased with illicit funds.

He didn't anticipate that an angelic-looking, golden-haired lady would be vying for the same thing.
