

Synopsis Moors

Rogue of the Moors

Newly widowed Bridget MacLeod's arranged marriage had been pleasant, but not passionate. When she arrives at her sister's home in the western Highlands for a visit, she finds the house empty. She has no choice but to accept neighbor Alasdair MacDonald's invitation to stay at his home with his boisterous family until her sister returns.

Alasdair is dangerous territory. Bridget remembers all too well her reaction to him when she stitched a wound in his muscular thigh the past spring.

Alasdair recalls the way Bridget's cool fingers touched his skin and heated other parts of him last year. Yet she is a grieving widow, so he must act the gentleman...a resolution that burns to cinders in the flames of their mutual attraction.

But a jealous pair of female eyes notices their lingering glances and furtive touches. A woman who will stop at nothing to make Alasdair her own. Trickery, seduction, blackmail...and something she has done before. Murder.

